Have locks been re-keyed since you moved in?

WINDOWS

Have double-hung windows been pinned?

Have screws been installed in the tracks of horizontal sliding windows?

Can windows left open for ventilation be secured?

Do basement windows have security bars, grills, or auxiliary locks?

Are window air conditioners anchored and protected by steel grillwork to prevent removal from the outside?

VACATION CHECKLIST

Arrange for a friend or neighbor to bring in the mail, milk, and/or newspapers. (if you ask for a temporary “stop delivery,” someone knows you won’t be home.)

Arrange to have your pet(s) fed/given water, at home rather than kept in a kennel.

If you have a second car that you leave outside, arrange to have it moved occasionally.

Arrange to have your lawn cut or snow shoveled as required, and for garbage to be put out and picked up as usual.

Arrange for secure storage of expensive or dangerous items, such as furs, jewelry, heirlooms, guns, other weapons.

Pay bills that will be due in your absence, and arrange for the payment of others that may arrive while you’re away.

Encourage neighborhood children to play in your yard while you are away.

Use timers for inside lights, and arrange to have outside lights turned on during darkness. Keep a small radio on a talk show station, at a low volume.

Have your alarm system checked before your departure.

Leave shades and drapes in the positions that they would normally be in if you were home, arranging, if possible, to have them raised and lowered or opened and closed routinely.

Set thermostats or air-conditioner according to weather conditions.

Make sure you have documented serial numbers on household items.

If you don’t have a generous neighbor, use a qualified and trustworthy house sitter.

Avoid publicity about your impending trip.

Leave an itinerary with the person watching your house, so that you can be notified in case of emergency.

Don’t pack your car the night before departure unless it’s in a secured garage.

The last thing you do before departure, check to see that all doors and windows are locked, that you have taken all necessary keys or left them with the person watching your home.

Disconnect or lock overhead garage door.

If you belong to an active Neighborhood Watch Program, let your Block Captain know that you're going to be gone, and who, if anyone, is going to "house sit."

When you return home, if there are any signs of burglary, DO NOT GO INSIDE; immediately call the police.
